From the Boston Reformer.

INFLUENCE OF SLAVERY ON LABOR. there is no question that interests the work- is manifested. ing men of the Free States more than slavery.

into manual laborers. In the first case labor is associated with weakness and is therefore despised; in the second, it is associated with the vanquished, the conquered enemy, and with bondage.

In the ancient world, the Greek and Roman, all-labor was performed by slaves .-The lines between the slave and the freeman were broad and impassable. With the freeman was associated elevation, refinement, nobleness, superiority; with the slave, vileness, coarseness, degradation, all that is conhe could not sit in the Senate; could not vote; could fill no places of honor, trust or emolument; could hold no property; could neither come nor go at his will; but was subject to all the caprices of his master. Nobody could desire him to the caprices of his master. Nobody could desire his situation. The word slave became the synonyme of all that men most dreaded and contemned. Brought up to see all manual labor performed by one with whom was connected only associations of this kind, no one could look upon it with any other feelings than those of contempt or abhorrence. Here is the origin of the present estimation of labor. Labor was desyet lives and falls upon the laborer.

Southern slavery keeps up the old associations. The wealthy planter is born to look upon labor as fit only for the weakest and in his estimation, the most degraded of beings. He feels almost from the cradle that he cannot labor without degrading himself He, when he associates with his class here at the North, imparts something of his own feelings to the northern man. He believes labor must always be performed by a class.

3. M. Gatog. labor must always be performed by a class as he does on the slave in his own section be obtained by the next term for the use of of the country, and the first that we know, school. Per order of Trustees.

J. ROBERTS, Sec'ry. all those with whom he has intercourse here, also become unable to distinguish any difference between the free white, and the enslaved black laborer.

So long as slavery exists in the country, so long as there is a large portion of our countrymen brought up to count labor servile, so long will the working man strive in vain to rise to his true social position. The laborer can rise only in proportion as he can change the associations connected with labor. These associations can be done away only by presenting the workingman a free, independent, refined, cultivated man, and he cannot be so presented, so long as there are millions of slaves in sight to whom refer- Halifax High School. ence may be constantly made.

We say then, the workingmen, and all who regard the welfare of the workingmen, are deeply concerned in anti-slavery measures. The whole laboring population of the free states are great, very great sufferers, in consequence of the existence of slavery .-Perhaps some will admit this, but will advise us to say nothing about it now, for the community is very much excited about slavery. Very well, we are glad that the community feels on the subject. Slavery is a great wrong, a wrong to the slave, a wrong to the master, a wrong to the free laborer, a wrong to humanity, and we do not envy that community which can hear it discussed without excitement. We are glad our countrymen feel on the subject.

Slavery must cease. Through all the past, man has worked man as he works his ox or his herse. The day for this has nearly ended. The dawn of a new day is about to streak the horizon. Man is to be the equal of man. Men are to be brothers ; and all chains are to be broken and all hearts are to be free to unite. This must come, and discussion will only hasten it.

A man of genius, without a wife-without a domestic partner of his bosom is always in trouble, always restlesss. The Devil considers such a solitaire his own peculiar property-and his holiness is eternally at his elbow, trying to lead him astray. But if the man of genius has the good luck to get an amiable, accomplished wife, congen-ial to his taste, pugh! he can set the old scoundrel at utter defiance, for we have it on get an amiable, accomplished wife, congenial to his taste, pugh! he can set the old scoundrel at utter defiance, for we have it on the highest authority that since the trick in the garden of Eden, Satan can't look an intelligent and beautiful woman in the face, without trembling.

We cut the following short commentary upon the foolish and disgusting fashion of We are told that we of the North have no concern with slavery, that it is one of the Lowell Patriot. We wish it to be extendomestic institutions of the South, and that it sively read, and the view it takes of the sub- John Cutting to the old road near S. F. The most abominable fashion we know It cannot be denied that even here, fash- of is that of wearing rings in the ears. It ion is decidedly against the respectability of is unquestionably a relict of barbarism, a labor. Any one of our fine ladies, or our custom that can only be accounted for by superfine gentlemen, would deem it a very supposing that sufficient time has not yet great misfortune to be reduced to labor for a clapsed since our forefathers lived a savage livelihood. Manual labor is accounted an employment inconsistent with refinement of manners and high social rank. It is so looked with long bits of gold, stone or glass counted by those who do not labor and by those who do, and this is the reason why we their faces, they would certainly abandon see so many racking their brains, devising such articles instanter. We laugh at the all manner of schemes, to obtain a livelihood Indians for boring their noses and lips, but by some other means than honest manual such a custom is certainly not more ridiculabor. No man will work with his hands Jously disfiguring than the practice just as a common laborer, or a mechanic, if he spoken of, so prevalent among our fashion-can help it. Whence comes this? The cause is to be found far buck in the manner of dressing the head in our days history of our race. In the savage state man with some of the feminine gender, that a fadoes not labor. Whatever of labor is done dy, rigged out in full costume, with her earis performed by woman. The proud war-rior, or the lordly hunter, disclaims the hum-ivory in her nose, to resemble a full blooded ble occupations of life. He throws them all upon woman as beneath his notice, makes her his slave and treats her as his inferior his friends, gave the best and only reason dred. Also, CABINET FURNITURE of because she performs the drudgery of life. Or rather he throws the drudgery upon her because he deems her his inferior, and he deems her inferior to himself because she is could be prevented from rooting by boring inferior in point of physical strength which to the savage is the mensure of greatness.

In the state next above the savage, woman is advanced laborated by solvents and inserting large pieces of wire, and it was supposed that ladies might be equally well broken of the troublesome habit they have of listening to other people's no longer a laborer. Prisoners taken in war, business by hanging large weights to the are now spared from death and converted ears, to pull them out of their natural shape and so deaden the sense of hearing."
